Scenario: Mr. and Mrs. Cheung's Stay at a Five-Star Resort

Mr. and Mrs. Cheung travelled from Hong Kong to the capital of Papua New Guinea, located near the equator, in July of last year. They booked a five-star resort hotel. ARRIVAL: Staff brewed famous local hot coffee for them as instructed by the manager, but they were not keen on it due to the climate. WAITING FOR ROOM: Due to a lack of staff, they waited over 45 minutes before being assigned a room. While waiting, the concierge helped them book restaurant seats for that evening and show tickets for the next day. The concierge reminded them that gentlemen need to wear suits and ladies need to wear evening gowns for dining. ROOM: The hotel claimed all rooms had sea views when the reservation was made. However, there was no sea view when they entered. After complaining, they were moved to a sea view room on a higher floor. DINNER: They were served by a designated staff member. The food was very delicious and they were satisfied.
